Session 4: trends (provocations)
Harry Verwayen | May 29 2018

Varna, Vision 2025

Europeana is an initiative of the EU

(1) Political and sociological environment

“In a ‘post-truth’ society the demand for trustworthy sources will increase. This is a huge opportunity for CHI.”

(2) Political and sociological environment

“CHI can contribute massively to the reduction of inequality.”

Context: Because of growing inequality, in particular of assets (1% of the population owns 50% of the assets), cultural heritage institutions, and Europeana in particular, have a huge opportunity to contribute to reduced inequalities by redistributing wealth in the form of access to cultural heritage.

(3) Regulatory environment

“CHI should continue to contribute to more open and harmonized copyright regulation.”

Context: while there has been much talk about the Digital Single Market and the importance of education, there have been little substantial improvements of the copyright situation for cultural heritage.

(4) Regulatory environment

“As in the physical world, the online platforms of cultural heritage institutions can and must be a safe haven.”

Context: The increased demand for transparency and accountability of our public institutions and the invasion of privacy by the Google's, Facebook's and the NSA's data collection on an unprecedented scale are two sides of the same coin: An erosion of trust in a society under constant economic pressure.

(5) User/customer needs

“CHI should focus on the use of video to open up collections to sustain and grow its audience reach.”

Context: Big platforms invest heavily in video. In 2016 Mark Zuckerberg announced Facebook’s aggressive move into video. Cisco predicts that in 2020 over 80% of consumer web traffic will be video. Europeana can use video without the need for massive investments. Video is not like games, VR et cetera, areas where Europeana needs large funds and still can’t compete in the long run. Quite the contrary, we could start with modest financial means.

(6) Economy/impact

“The CH sector should be recognised for its Social Return on Investment, rather than its direct commercial value to the economy”

Context: in addition to culture’s direct contribution to the GDP and employment (eg tourism, creative industries) it seems a broader view of the economy is taking root where contributions to for instance education, equality, health, wellbeing and identity are increasingly accepted as important contributions to society (see The Donut Economy).

(7) Technology

“CHI should accelerate its investments in Narrow Artificial Intelligence”

Context: In the past 20 years we have slept through two of the major revolutions in our field: search engines and Wikipedia. After a steady but slow rise over the past 30 years, the progress with Narrow Artificial Intelligences has very recently switched into exponential mode. Let's not sleep through this revolution, too.

(8) Competition

“We need a Cultural Commons as a public alternative to Google and FB”

Context: there is a strong tendency towards tech monopolisation (Facebook, Google, Amazon, ...) in general. Google Arts & Culture is manifesting itself more strongly than before. If CHI's only worry about their own brand and bottom line we will see investments only in the glossy but not necessarily in enduring management of their digital collections. Unless we are able to bring CHI together in a cultural commons, we will lose the battle against the googles.
